USG members under investigation

By BRANDI BARHITE
The BG News

The president of the Undergraduate Student Government and a USG cabinet member are under investigation by the Office of Student Life for allegedly using a University golf cart without authorization, crashing it and leaving the scene early Monday morning.

Clint Gault, USG president and Kevin Simmons, a member of Gault's cabinet, could lose their positions or be suspended if they are found in violation of the student code, according to the University Student Handbook.

Gault and Simmons were stopped by the University police on Frazee St. at 5 a.m., after the University Health Center custodial staff, reported that two men crashed a golf cart in front of the Student Services Building and left in another automobile.

The campus police cited Simmons, who admitted he crashed the golf cart, for willful/wanton disregard for safety. The incident is still being investigated to determine if separate charges will be filed by the campus police, according to Dick Gullufsen, University police information officer.

"No one has been criminally charged," Gullufsen said.

Corporal John Shumaker, one of the officers who stopped Gault and Simmons, said the golf cart driver hit the handicap ramp near the Student Services Building. Shumaker said the golf cart was taken without proper authorization and would not comment to whether it would be considered theft.

The Office of Student Life will decide by the end of the week if they will file charges against Gault and Simmons, said Jill Carr, associate dean of students in the Office of Student Life.

Lot 6 poses possible threat for students

By CRAIG GIFFORD
The BG News

Several University students are concerned with their safety when parking in Lot 6, overflow section.

Many of the students believe the overflow section of the parking lot is not lit adequately enough, and does not provide enough emergency phones, considering the distance from the residence halls.

Due to new parking rules and regulations, however, students are forced to park in this lot because Lots 8, 9 and 12 are used for short-term parking now, said Stacie Enriquez, manager of the Parking and Traffic Division, for the University.

Because of the great deal of cars, many are ending up in the overflow section, behind the football stadium. It is in this section that many University students have found themselves worried about their safety and well-being.

"I sometimes come home from a weekend, and it is late at night," said Emily Pugh, a sophomore VCT major. "It doesn't feel safe out there because there are hardly any lights and no emergency phones until you get close to the campus."

Jason Drummond, a freshman psychology major, shares similar thoughts about the lighting and emergency phones.

"There needs to be better lighting and you shouldn't have to run to get to an emergency phone."

Although there have never been any real problems with safety on campus, according to James Wiegand, Director of Public Safety, students are still worried.

"It's real dark out there, a person could easily sneak up on someone," said Robert Ride-nour, a sophomore international business major.

The University is taking steps toward making things safer for the students who park out there.

According to Enriquez, there have already been additional light poles added, and at least two more are on their way. She also said that an additional emergency phone for this area is also being looked into.

These are not the only measures being taken towards making the overflow parking section safer. Security is also being added to these areas.

"We have asked the night staff to pay attention to that area, specifically at night," Wiegand said.

On top of these measures, according to Wiegand, there is a shuttle that goes out to that area to pick up students.

"Every other shuttle, makes a trip around the stadium," he said. This is one safety measure that has been noticed and appreciated by the University students.

"The good thing is they have a shuttle going out there," said Zach Bastoky, a sophomore early childhood education major.

"Yes, we have had some thefts and some burglaries in the past, but this has been and is a very safe campus," Wiegand said.

Gallagher II brings flying food to BG

By JEFF ARNETT
The BG News

Laughter and chunks of smashed food will fill the Claz-Zel Theatre this weekend as "Gallagher II: The Living Sequel" comes to Bowling Green.

"Gallagher II" is Ron Gallagher, the younger brother of Leo, the long-haired comic who made the Sledge-O-Matic famous. According to Jim Walter, president of Great Eastern Theatres, which owns the Claz-Zel, Ron may not be the same Gallagher who made the surname famous, but his show is virtually identical to his older brother's.

"They have almost an identical show," Walter said. "It would be difficult to tell them apart."

The Gallaghers have performed on-stage together, but now do separate, nearly identical shows. The younger Gallagher has said he basically does and impersonation of his brother.

Ron's show will contain all the elements of the elder Gal-

Thousands evacuated as Floyd's power approaches

Associated Press Writer

COCOA BEACH, Fla.— From Florida to the Carolinas, evacuees fleeing Hurricane Floyd streamed inland in bumper-to-bumper traffic Tuesday as one of the most fearsome storms of the century threatened to wreak havoc "like a weed-eater going up the coast."

Nearly 2 million people were told to get out of the way as Floyd skirted the north-central Florida coast, menacing an area from Cape Canaveral to Jacksonville with its 140 mph winds. The monstrous, 600-mile storm — wider than the whole state of Florida — threatened to roll ashore early Thursday, probably in Georgia or South Carolina.

By 5 p.m., Floyd was centered 235 miles southeast of Cape Canaveral, moving northwest at 12 mph. Its winds had eased from Monday's 155 mph, but it was still a Category 4 storm, the second most powerful hurricane designation.

"If this thing parallels us, it could act like a weed-eater going up the coast," said Craig Fugate of the Florida Emergency Operations Center.

Walt Disney World closed early because of the weather for the first time in its 28-year history. Other Orlando-area resorts like Universal Studios and SeaWorld also shut down.

At Cape Canaveral's nearly deserted Kennedy Space Center, 102 workers volunteered to stay behind to ride out Floyd, which NASA feared could destroy launch pads and the hangars where all four space shuttles are kept.

"Everybody else is gone. It's kind of eerie out here," NASA spokesman George Diller, one of the volunteers, said by telephone from a fortified building at the space center.

President Clinton issued pre-emptive disaster declarations for Florida and Georgia to enable recovery efforts to begin as quickly as possible. He also planned to return a day early from his trip to New Zealand.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency set up a staging area in Atlanta, stockpiling food, ice, water, cots, sleeping bags, blankets, generators, portable toilets, flashlights and plastic sheeting so that they could be delivered to hard-hit areas in a hurry.

In Georgia, authorities ordered 500,000 people to evacuate six coastal counties. A similar order covered 800,000 people in South Carolina, a week shy of the 10th anniversary of Hurricane Hugo's destructive run.

In North Carolina, residents were urged to evacuate outlying islands on the Outer Banks, and Gov. Jim Hunt declared a state of emergency.

"Get out of harm's way," Hunt said. "Don't tempt it."

In North and central Florida, where hundreds of thousands were warned to clear out, traffic was bumper-to-bumper on hurricane escape routes.

"We are getting out of Dodge," said Phyllis Cusack of Daytona Beach, who was driving westward on Interstate 10 with her daughter. "We're just going to drive and find a hotel, and we brought pillows in case we don't find one."

Danny Mills, a 34-year-old Kennedy Space Center worker, got stuck in traffic, managing only 15 miles in 2 1/2 hours. He became so frustrated he simply turned around and returned to Cape Canaveral.

"It was just inching along," he said. "You made a mile every five to 10 minutes. There were people going on the sides of the road. People were getting angry."

Daytona Beach, Palm Beach and other coastal areas were virtual ghost towns as most people appeared to heed evacu-

Ribeau hosts discussion

By AMYJO L. BROWN
The BG News

Tonight a small gathering of students will meet with President Sidney Ribeau in his home to discuss issues concerning the campus.

Although no specific agenda is scheduled, the president will discuss the experiences the students have had on campus and any problems or questions they have about the University.

"The meeting will be very open-ended," said Eileen Sullivan, interim special assistant to the president. "There's no agenda except to provide a forum for students to talk."

Meetings at the president's house happen often, according to Sullivan.

"It helps because it gives the president an opportunity to listen to students first hand," she said. "When things or problems come up, there will be a lot of follow up."

She estimated that students

Drinking doesn't mean getting drunk

I was sitting on my bedroom floor and waiting for inspiration to strike, listening to my Moxy Fruvous CD and getting rather frustrated at myself for once again not writing down any of the ideas I'd had over the past week (you'd think I'd learn after a year or so). Then, magically, I realized that "The Drinking Song" was playing and at the same time my eyes landed on Mary Beth Murtha's column from last week.

Oh wait, Mary Beth wrote about the roles people take on when they drink: the casual "whatever I do, wherever I go, I'll toss back a few beers and have fun" person and the 110 percent drunk. But mainly she talked about how many women tend to take on the caretaker role, staying sober enough to spot trouble and be able to do something about it.

My roommate Shannon, completely able to associate with the role, faped up the column next to her computer and highlighted parts of it that she thought applied to her. Then she took Mary Beth's advice over the weekend and had quite a bit of fun realizing that the world's not going to stop if she's not there to take care of everyone.

I, on the other hand, was waiting for her when she got home, the good mother hen that I am.

You know what? I'm a senior, graduating in May, and I don't think I've ever been to a bar in BG. In fact, the only bars I've been to are the one in my hometown Pemberville (because one night a week they have pretty good margaritas for a dollar a piece) and to some club in Toledo for a friend's 21st birthday outing.

Sometimes I'm tempted to go out, like on Saturday nights when I hear everyone else out having a great time. And it's not that I've never been to parties. I've been to a few. But I don't like beer, and hanging out with a lot of people that I don't know doesn't appeal to me. But I'm really not the stay-at-home-and-play-Monopoly type, either.

Let me take you back a few years, before I had anything but Communion wine and sips of Grandpa's whiskey-spiked colas. I was against drinking — well, drinking more than a beer an hour or whatever. I wanted nothing to do with drunk people. Even slightly out-of-control was an evil in my head, especially if you weren't 21. (I'm such a good little law-abiding citizen).

I went out one night (before I was 21) with this guy and he was new to town and was asking about the bars and stuff. I told him I didn't like the bars, they were just facilitators to weak-minded people, blah blah blah. I don't remember everything I said then.

And he gave me this look and he knew I'd never had a shot or a beer in my whole life. And he cautiously told me how it was fun to be able to have a few drinks with friends in a pub (I love that word) — not to get fall-down drunk, but to get happy and goofy and I now realize that's what makes alcohol appealing to people, although I don't quite think I believed him at the time.

But now I'm 21. I've changed my mind. I've been fairly tipsy and yes, he was right. Drinking is fun; I find that I'm more social and more likely to talk to a complete stranger. The problem is, I don't like to see people drink to excess, and I know that many of my friends will and do. And I'm the one who will stay sober enough to clean up after them.

Yet, at the same time, I feel as though I'm missing out on some vital part of college life. Like I should go out just once and get drunk out of my mind just to see what it's like. And why should I feel that way? I don't want to deal with hangovers. I put up with enough headaches as it is.

This very sober columnist can be reached at jlohbr@bgnet.bgsu.edu.

Scout 'requirements' for hypothetical new boy band

To: Jeff Spin/Talent Scout.

From: Rick Record/Manager of The Blandstreet Boys

I've noticed that there aren't enough bands out there for teenage girls.

Although, I haven't checked MTV today to see what new boy band has popped up, I do know that my band will be perfect for your record company. There's just one problem — I don't actually have the band yet. However, I have developed a formula so you can scout out the guys needed for this band. So here's what I'll need for my band:

A white guy with blonde hair (died or not — preferably natural). We'll dress him up and he'll be the preppy guy. They are also known to shop at The Gap.

I'll need a black guy next. He can grow his hair in dreadlocks or shave his head — either one is okay. He will be the urban guy.

Okay, now I'll need a white grungy guy. He can't be blonde and piercing would be nice. He also has to wear really beat-up clothes and look somewhat dirty. He also has to be mysterious; he can't use drugs but he can hint that he does in interviews.

Finally I need an athletic guy — any ethnicity would be nice, but he has to wear either A) a baseball cap backwards or B) a basketball jersey. We need to make sure that everyone knows this guy is an athlete.

stance and they must be about love.

Sample verse: I want you to be mine/ That would be just fine. Let's go driving in my car/ We'll go real, real far.

(Chorus)

You'll be mine today; You'll be mine [Warning to band: Polysyllabic words coming up] tomorrow; or else I'll have nothing but sorrow. So be with me tomorrow. (Insert sound of teenage girls screaming at concerts.)

Speaking of concerts, we'll need to work on dance moves for these guys; all the movements need to be the same, and we'll need a choreographer with very limited dance moves. Call Paula Abdul — she doesn't have a career anymore; I think she'll help us.

Also, at concerts, my band will have no problems since every song they sing will be lip-synched. (Which does make me wonder where N' Sync got their name, but that's a question for another day).

So, that's my band; I want it that way.

Letter to the Editor

Past cartoon gives distorted view of Greeks

It seems The BG News has done it again with the printing of its editorial cartoon "Sheep Sororities." In a time when the Greek community is gearing up for Fall Recruitment, The BG

News, instead of placing an article supporting the upcoming fall events, has decided to place a rather tasteless editorial cartoon that once again downplays what the sorority/fraternity life can really become for most individuals.

Sure, Greeks fouling up will make every frontpage. That's news, but why not look at the thousands of community service hours, the leadership and the changes that this Greek community is making, even if it is hidden away in the back pages of the paper. That's news to us.

Automakers not giving up on gas engine

Associated Press Writer

FRANKFURT, Germany — Dreaming of a future where you never have to go to a gas station again and can just plug your car in at night for a full day of driving? It's not going to happen any time soon.

Far from abandoning the gas engine, automakers are showcasing new technologies at the Frankfurt auto show to boost fuel economy using just plain old gasoline.

"A pure electric car? I don't think that will ever become the mainstream," said Jos De Boes, general manager for vehicle engineering in Toyota's European division.

The engines borrow ideas from technology already widely used in diesel engines. Direct injection pumps fuel at high pressure directly into the engine cylinders, using advances in computers to control the mix between fuel and air.

The result is an engine that can get up to 35 percent better fuel consumption than a diesel engine while also reducing carbon dioxide emissions and putting out more power.

Schmitz sentenced for talkshow death

Associated Press Writer

PONTIAC, Mich. — A man who fatally shot a gay acquaintance who revealed a crush on him during a taping of "The Jenny Jones Show" was sentenced Tuesday to 25 to 50 years in prison.

Jonathan Schmitz trembled as Oakland County Circuit Court Judge Wendy Potts sentenced him for the 1995 shotgun slaying of Scott Amedure.

"The sentence of this court will rob you of your youth, but it will not rob you of your life," Potts told Schmitz.

Schmitz, 28, apologized to the Amedure family and said, "I'd like to ask God for forgiveness."

Amedure's weeping mother asked the judge to give Schmitz a long prison term.

"When will we be able to get on with our lives? When will justice be served and be final?" Patricia Graves said, her voice cracking. Amedure's father, Frank Amedure Sr., also wept as he spoke, telling the judge, "I'll never see my son's smile again."

Ms. Jones and the producers of the show were not called to testify at Schmitz's second trial, as they had been in the first criminal trial and the civil trial.

Ride may stay closed until next year

Associated Press Writer

KINGS MILLS, Ohio — Paramount's Kings Island may keep its Drop Zone ride closed until next season unless the amusement park learns soon what caused a fatal accident on a similar ride in California.

Kings Island officials hope they will get the information from Paramount's Great America park in Santa Clara, Calif., in time to reopen the Drop Zone before Kings Island closes for the season Oct. 31, spokesman Jeffrey Seibert said Tuesday.

A 12-year-old boy died when he fell from a ride, also called the Drop Zone, at Great America on Aug. 23. California authorities are investigating whether the accident was caused by a problem with the ride or misconduct by the victim.

Kings Island, about 20 miles north of Cincinnati, ended daily operations the week after Labor Day and is now open just on weekends.

Kings Island's management said that even though the rides differ in their design, they were similar enough to warrant precautionary measures.

Home health care curb services to elderly

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Some home health care companies say new Medicare payment caps have prompted them to curb services to elderly and disabled patients with expensive medical problems, such as diabetes or congestive heart failure.

"It raises the important question as to whether or not we have created a situation where the sicker patients in our society are not wanted by anybody because of the higher cost of their care," said Barbara Markham Smith, a George Washington University researcher.

The university on Tuesday released the results of a survey of 28 home care companies in nine states: California, Florida, Indiana, Iowa, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Pennsylvania and Texas.

The study, paid for by the National Association for Home Care and the Home Health Services and Staffing Association, was not designed to be statistically representative of all home care companies. But among those surveyed, two-thirds said they had taken steps to lower the proportion of very sick Medicare patients they serve.

U.N. pulls out of Dili compound; chaos hits city

DILI, Indonesia — Indonesian soldiers looted the abandoned U.N. mission in East Timor on Tuesday, just hours after 110 U.N. personnel and 1,300 East Timorese were evacuated and flown to safety to end a 10-day siege.

Office equipment and computers were carted away and vehicles were trashed by the soldiers — "the very people we asked to secure the compound when U.N. staff moved to the Australian consulate," U.N. spokesman Fred Eckhard said in New York.

There were reports Tuesday that the compound was also torched, but Eckhard said he was told that it was not the compound but a small house nearby that had been burned.

The remaining U.N. staff members, holed up in the Australian consulate, reported that a black plume of smoke was rising from the direction of the compound in the provincial capital of Dili, said Fernando del Mundo, spokesman for the U.N.

High Commissioner for Refugees in Jakarta.

The staff feared their headquarters had been set ablaze by pro-Indonesia militiamen, he said.

The dozen U.N. personnel who stayed behind in Dili were to prepare the way for an international peacekeeping force, the makeup of which was being negotiated by Indonesian and U.N. officials Tuesday.

But time appeared to be running out, with more than 200,000 East Timorese risking starvation because they are cut off from food supplies and drinking water, a U.N. agency said Tuesday.

About 7,000 people have been killed and 100,000 have been forcibly relocated to West Timor since anti-independence militias and Indonesian soldiers began a rampage of violence following the province's vote Aug. 30 to break away from Indonesia, the Rome-based Food and Agriculture Organization said.

While it is impossible to confirm the number killed in the past week, previous estimates have ranged from 600 to 7,000.

In the Indonesian capital of Jakarta, nearly 1,000 students tried to march on parliament Tuesday, demanding the resignation of President B.J. Habibie and the end of military involvement in politics — and blaming both for the bloodshed in East Timor.

Two students were wounded by plastic bullets after the crowd damaged two police cars and set fire to an army vehicle.

In New York, the U.N. Security Council and Indonesian Foreign Minister Ali Alatas worked Tuesday to resolve differences in the makeup of a peacekeeping force intended to halt the violence in East Timor.

U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan said peacekeepers could be on the ground by the week-end.

An Australian aid-drop of food and other supplies could start as soon as Thursday.

The Atlanta-based Carter Center, which monitors international political crises, said militiamen, backed by the Indonesian military, continue to terrorize and kill refugees in camps set up in West Timor.

In Rome, East Timor's spiritual leader said he had asked Pope John Paul II to pressure President Clinton for quick action.

Bishop Carlos Belo, co-winner of the 1996 Nobel Peace Prize and the Roman Catholic leader of most of the territory's 850,000 people, said peacekeepers and humanitarian aid must be dispatched as soon as possible.

Church officials fear dozens of priests and nuns have been slaughtered.

While almost 90 percent of Indonesia's 210 million people are Muslim, East Timor's population was overwhelmingly Catholic. Poor and largely uneducated, East Timorese were renowned for their devotion to their faith, introduced by Portuguese colonizers four centuries ago.

Despite Vatican accusations of oppression, some commentators say the role religion played in the conflict has been overstated.

"The violence is due more to a power struggle within the military," said Kusnanto Anggoro, a political analyst at the Center of Strategic and International Studies, a Jakarta think tank.

The Indonesian military started its pullout from the province on Tuesday, with laughing soldiers and marines clambering onto a navy landing ship in Dili's harbor as thousands of desperate refugees looked on.

The U.N. staff and East Timorese staying at the U.N. compound were evacuated under the guard of Indonesian troops through burned-out and looted streets to the airport. They were flown to the northern Australian city of Darwin.

The U.N. compound had become a symbol of international resolve to shepherd East Timor to independence and protect its people after 78.5 percent of voters chose to break away from Indonesia, which invaded in 1975.

For more than a week, guns were fired outside the compound walls and cars were smashed and looted. Militiamen threatened to lob in grenades.

The composition of the multinational force to patrol East Timor has been a sticking point in negotiations between Indonesia and the United Nations.

While Habibie and his foreign minister have set no conditions, the military says it won't accept Australia, which has been the most vocal advocate of a force. Some Indonesians accuse Australia of meddling in the conflict.

Pageant reconsiders lifting ban on divorced, pregnant women

By JOHN CURRAN

Associated Press Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — The head of the Miss America pageant on Tuesday backed off plans to allow women who have been divorced or pregnant to compete for the title, saying the pageant's board of directors would reconsider its decision.

Robert L. Beck, CEO of the Miss America Organization, said the board had agreed to hold off implementing the new rules — which were to take effect starting next year — pending talks with state pageant operators, who are furious about the changes.

The Associated Press reported Monday that the pageant had decided to break with nearly 50 years of tradition by striking provisions in the contestant contracts that require women to swear they have never been married and never been pregnant.

State pageant officials say the changes would mar the "high moral standards" Miss America has stood for. Former Miss America winners, current contestants and the former CEO of the pageant have also all lined up against the changes.

"It's just sad," said Jack Lawson, chairman of the Miss Montana Pageant.

Several state pageant directors who asked not to be named Tuesday said there would be mass defections by states from the Miss America program if the changes stand.

"I don't know what the outcome of the dialogue will be," Beck said Tuesday in his first public statements about the controversy. Asked if it was possible that the old rules will stand, he said: "That's always a possibility."

The new rules, adopted at a June meeting of the board, would require contestants to swear that "I am unmarried" and "I am not the natural or adoptive parent of any child."

They would open the door to divorcees, women who have had abortions and women who have given birth to children who later died.

The idea was to bring the contestant contract into compliance with New Jersey laws against discrimination, Beck said in an affidavit filed in court as part of the legal action.

The pageant notified state operators about the change last month, telling them their contestants would have to sign the new contract to compete in Saturday's 79th annual Miss America Pageant here.

The states went to court Aug. 17 to fight the contract.

In an out-of-court settlement, the pageant agreed not to require this year's contestants to sign the new contract, and the National Association of Miss America State Pageants agreed to withdraw its request for an injunction preventing the Miss America Organization from forcing them to sign.

On Tuesday, Beck tried to play down the controversy, saying that the board's agreement not to apply the rule change immediately meant it was "tabling discussion of the matter until after this year's national competition."

But state pageant officials told the AP that, despite the exemption for this year, the rule change by the board remained in effect and would have been enforced starting next year.

Meanwhile, the state pageant association said Tuesday it would go back to court to seek a judge's ruling on whether in fact the old rules violated New Jersey's anti-discrimination laws, as Beck had suggested in his affidavit.

Government warns citizens of Y2K failures overseas

By TED BRIDIS

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — In what promises to be the best road map yet for identifying global problems caused by the Year 2000 technology glitch, the State Department today said it was preparing country-by-country warnings for Americans living or traveling in 194 nations.

While there is no reason yet to issue any specific warning, Kevin Herbert, director of overseas citizens services at the department, said Americans could face "potential difficulties" in obtaining medical services, proper water and other facilities as a result of malfunctioning computers.

tioning computers.

"The Department of State has no greater responsibility than safeguarding Americans abroad," Herbert said, in announcing that technology warnings would be routinely issued along with familiar travel advisories.

At a news conference, Herbert said this would help Americans make overseas travel decisions.

The government warned, for example, that in China there "may be a risk of potential disruption in the key sectors of banking and finance, telecommunications, medical services and in electrical power and infrastructure systems outside of the coastal cities."

It cautioned that failures in Russia were "likely to occur in the key sectors of electrical power, heat, telecommunications, transportation and financial and emergency services."

The unprecise warnings will include details from countries where visiting Americans could be affected by power outages, water shortages and other potentially serious problems if computers are unable to recognize the four-digit date 2000 on Jan. 1.

Britain said it also planned to publish today a country-by-country advisory to warn British citizens about nations most at risk from the Year 2000 technology problem.

The U.S. reports were compiled by its embassies worldwide. Experts have long complained about the difficulties collecting adequate information from foreign governments about possible computer failures.

Fair offers taste of city to students

By KIMBERLY DUPPS
The BG News

Students had the opportunity to visit vendor booths, eat free food and get information about local businesses at the annual Merchants Fair yesterday.

The event was sponsored by The BG News, the Bowling Green Chamber of Commerce and the Downtown Business Association.

"There's a wide variety of restaurants, retail shops and services in downtown Bowling Green," Earlene Kilpatrick, director of the Downtown Business Association, said. "It's a clean, fun environment where students can stroll the downtown area."

Nearly 60 of those local businesses represented their services to students, faculty and staff of the University. Booths were stocked with information fliers, food, contests and special offers for students.

"We are here to make sure everyone knows we're here," Bob Duling, husband of the owner of Monty's Hair Fashions, said. "We try to set up specials for the students."

At Monty's, there is 20 percent off all hair and nail services Monday through Thursday.

At the fair, students could sample food, drink coffee and shop. They could also do their banking and get their bikes fixed.

"We're here to introduce the coffee shop to new students, give out coupons and register people for the e-mail newsletter on specials, the soup schedule and bands that will be playing here. I hope new students make Cosmo's their new coffee shop," George Loper, owner of Cosmo's Coffeehouse, said.

The Merchants Fair also allows new students to learn about what the city of Bowling Green has to offer them, according to Joan Gordon, executive director of the Bowling Green Chamber of Commerce and main coordinator of the Merchants Fair.

"It makes students, faculty and staff acquainted with the surrounding Bowling Green community," Gordon said. "We offer a lot of products and services that new students should know about and they're important to the economy of Bowling Green."

In addition to individual business contests and specials, there was a grand prize drawing with grocery certificates, free video rentals and merchant packages. These prizes were donated by the Holiday Travel Center, Chamber of Commerce, Virtual PC's, Foodtown Plus, Kroger, Meijer, Staples, Downtown Merchants, Churchill's and the Woodland Mall Merchants Association.

Recent state grant funds kids' programs

Award will be divided among numerous programs aimed at children

By AMYJO L. BROWN
The BG News

A youth crime prevention grant given to the state of Ohio will benefit a local junior high program, as well as the Wood County Juvenile Court System.

The $1,665,000 award will be divided up among state, county and city programs aimed at keeping kids out of trouble. Both Bowling Green and Wood County programs will receive part of the grant. The exact amount will be determined by population.

Bowling Green will use their grant money to help support E.Z. PLUS, a program started as a memorial to Eric Zimmerman, an officer killed off-duty in a car accident several years ago.

"The E.Z. PLUS program is a positive type situation with junior high kids. They agree to sign a contract to remain alcohol, drug, tobacco and violence free."

"The E.Z. PLUS program is a positive type situation with junior high kids," said Major Sam Johnson of the Bowling Green Police. "They agree to sign a contract to remain alcohol, drug, tobacco and violence free."

identification card which gains them free entry into activities sponsored by E.Z. PLUS.

Activities have included high school dances, pool parties with DJs and dinner and a movie for which the E.Z. PLUS organization rented a movie theater and a movie at the Woodland Mall for the students.

"We open it up to kids," Sergeant Mark McDonough said, "We ask them what they want to do."

Students' IDs can be taken away by a police officer, teacher or parent if the student violates the contract. If it is revoked, the student must go through a hearing process in order to get it back.

"We want to make it so important to them, they want to get back in," McDonough

Soaring Into The New Millennium

Bowling Green State University Homecoming

STORM

ation orders. Most gas stations, restaurants and shops were closed.

Still, some people refused to abandon their homes and businesses. Some went to the beach to watch the increasingly powerful surf, while others kicked back with friends in bars.

In New Smyrna Beach, 10 miles south of Daytona Beach, sheriff's deputy Bruce Fleischmann said: "We're not going to arrest people for staying. We just ask for their next of kin."

While Americans were fleeing inland, Hurricane Floyd vented its fury on the Bahamas, toppling trees and power lines, stripping roofs from homes and sending roiling sea waters into the streets of the capital, Nassau. Phone service was cut off throughout much of the low-lying Atlantic archipelago, and residents and tourists sought safety in government shelters.

A hurricane warning was in effect along the U.S. coast from Boca Raton, Fla., to Little River Inlet, S.C. High surf advisories were in effect as far north as New York's Long Island.

The hurricane warning was lifted in the Miami area after the storm made a northward turn, and evacuees there were allowed to return home.

But with hurricane winds extending 125 miles from Floyd's eye and tropical storm-force winds reaching out as far as 290 miles, Floyd could reach clear across the state to Tampa, on Florida's Gulf Coast.

Hundreds of airline flights in and out of Florida and Georgia were canceled, and Amtrak suspended train service into and out of Miami, scrambling the plans of vacationers and business travelers around the country. The Navy sent ships to ride out the storm at sea, and military aircraft were flown inland to bases from Maine to Texas.

In South Carolina, the Marine boot camp at Parris Island was preparing school buses to move 7,000 recruits to inland shelter.

Dorothy Galbreath, 75, insisted on staying in her beachfront home in New Smyrna Beach. She did not want to risk moving her son Ricky Galbreath, 51, because he has cerebral palsy and cannot walk or talk.

"I just put it in God's hands and let him take care of it," she said.

Also not wanting to leave was Jacobia Reynolds, who had come to Disney World from Ridgeville, Conn., with her husband and three children.

"We've been saving for this for a couple years," she said. "We're going to have a good time until they kick us out."

lagher's show, including the infamous Sledge-O-Matic, which the Gallaghers use to emphasize the punch line by smashing everything from watermelons to soda pop to ketchup.

In preparation for the Sledge-O-Matic, sheets of plastic have been put over the walls near the Cla-Zel's stage. Audience members in the first eight to 10 rows, the "splatter zone," according to ticket seller Pat Robinson, are advised to wear protection. Walter compared the front rows to those at a Sea World show.

"The people in the front will get wet, there's no question about that," Walter said.

He added that although the splatter zone will get most of the debris, no one in the theater is really safe.

Walter and Robinson said the show has been selling tickets well.

"They've been doing very well," Robinson said.

Robinson, who has sold tickets at the theater every night since Aug. 18, said the show is popular among University students. Many students, she said, come to see other shows and buy tickets when they see the Gallagher poster.

According to Walter, students may make up as much as half of the audience at the show.

"Gallagher II" is the Cla-Zel's first attempt to bring an live act from outside the theater. Currently the Cla-Zel hosts a weird live action accompaniment to "The Rocky Horror Picture Show," but it is produced by the theater.

Walter said the Cla-Zel is looking to bring more outside acts in the future.

"We're definitely looking to do one in the spring," Walter said. Two possibilities he mentioned for that show are Elvis impersonators and performer Soupie Sales.

"Gallagher II: The Living Sequel" will be performed 7 p.m. Friday and 7 and 9:30 p.m. Saturday at the Cla-Zel Theatre.

meet with the president once a month, five or six months a year.

Students are selected based on different demographics each time.

"They are grouped by every type of population imaginable," Sullivan said. "Students who work, first-year students, athletes, students involved in government or in service organizations."

For tonight's meeting many of the students were selected because of their positions as Resident Advisors. Also most of the students attending are seniors, according to Nick Hennessey, special assistant to the vice president for student affairs.

"The president has an interest in hearing from the seniors because of their experiences here," Sullivan said.

Mark Kangas, a junior criminal justice and accounting major, said he was aware that the president met with students, but he did not know how students were invited. He was surprised when he received an invitation.

"I'm in an RA position and the other day we were sitting around in council, talking about speaking to the president," he said. "That Friday, I was surprised to find an invitation to the meeting."

The meetings at the president's home began when Ribeau first came to the University four years ago.

"He wanted a forum where he could visit with students informally," Sullivan said.

Students will join Ribeau in his home tonight from 6 to 8 p.m. and will share pizza and pop as they discuss their ideas.

Scientists not happy with plan to use polygraph to catch spies

By WILLIAM SCHIFFMANN
Associated Press Writer

LIVERMORE, Calif. — More than a dozen scientists at one of the nation's top nuclear weapons labs on Tuesday spoke against the government's plan to require top-security researchers to take lie detector tests in an effort to catch spies.

Angry researchers at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory criticized the idea that polygraph tests were needed and questioned their accuracy.

"You're coming here to threaten our honor and integrity, to require us on effective threat to our employment to volunteer for an even deeper intrusion to our right to privacy," said David Dearborn, a lab scientist.

Dr. Douglass E. Post, a lab physicist, warned that the tests will make it even harder to recruit and retain talented scientists, since the private sector does not require them and offers higher salaries.

In June, the Energy Department announced plans to give polygraph tests to some 5,000 workers in sensitive nuclear weapons jobs, part of a broad initiative to beef up security after widely publicized accusations of leaks to the Chinese.

A panel of four members heard the testimony. The panel will also hold hearings in Albuquerque, N.M., Los Alamos, N.M., and in Washington.

BG opens conference play

By PETE STELLA
The BG News

Today, the BG women's soccer teams quest for the Mid-American Conference championship begins.

This week, they face two teams that also advanced to the semi-finals of the MAC conference tournament.

The Golden Flashes of Kent State University invade Cochrane Field today for a 4 p.m. game against the Falcons. Kent is currently 4-0-0 overall with the Falcons edging them in the series record, 2-0-1.

"Kent is coming in here with a great record," BG coach Tom Piccirillo said. "They have not played the kind of teams that we have so far this season and they have also never beaten us."

The Golden Flashes are off to the best start of the programs history so far. Last year, they finished 13-7-1 overall and took fourth place in the MAC with a 5-4-1 record. Coach Colleen Marcum is in her third year at the helm of Kent and has compiled a 20-21-3 record.

Last September 27, BG and Kent battled it out at Cochrane Field and ended deadlocked in a 1-1 tie.

"We are looking for some redemption against them," Piccirillo said. "Last year, they tied us and danced around like they had just won the World Cup. We found that a little insulting because we are out here to win every game."

Last Sunday, the Brown and Orange increased their record to 3-2-0 with a victory over Niagara University, 2-0. The Falcons received goals from senior Michelle Lisy and junior Autumn Harris with junior Stephanie Heller assisted on both scores.

"We need to bring our game to a higher level in MAC play because our conference foes are very good," Heller said. "We dominated the game against Niagara and a lot of our shots on goal were unlucky. I think we have much confidence in our play and I also think we are ready for MAC play."

Also on Sunday, Piccirillo notched his 100th win as a head coach.

"Against Kent, we are going to spread the field out on them," Piccirillo said. "Their home field is smaller than Cochrane field so we will look to make them run a lot as we did against Niagara. We also need to finish off our shots more."

Sunday, BG heads to DeKalb Illinois to take on two time MAC tournament champion Northern Illinois.

Falcons Stephanie Heller, Michelle Lisy, Jill Conover, 25, and several others react to a goal during the Niagara match last Sunday. BG plays Kent today for their first conference game of 1999.

What happened on Sunday?

Prior to the Browns Stealers game, Drew Carey told everyone that had ever made a Cleveland joke to shut up.

Maybe he should have waited until after the game to decide if he wanted to say something like that.

I am from the east side of Cleveland and I am a Browns fan but not to the obsessive point as some fans are. I was very pissed when Art Modell took the Browns to Baltimore in 1995 and would love to take some shots at him if I ever meet him.

I was also very happy when I found out that the Browns were coming back in the form of an expansion team and were getting a new stadium built for them on the ruins of the old, historical one.

Sunday I sat with my four wonderful roommates in our apartment and got ready to watch something that the city of Cleveland has been counting down for four years. The new stadium looked awesome and seeing the military planes fly overhead gave me goosebumps.

I actually thought that the Browns would have a chance, not so much to beat the Stealers, but at least give a good effort. After about the second quarter, I decided to go into my room and do some homework.

43-0 !!! On national television? What the hell is up with that??

The Stealers aren't really that great and I assumed that the hype about the Browns returning might give them somewhat of an advantage.

I think that Kordell Stewart, the Stealers quarterback, is the worst quarterback in the league but he absolutely destroyed the Browns defense. And I thought that most of the Browns veterans were in the secondary? It sure didn't look like it.

Tim Couch, supposedly the future of the Browns, came in and on his first professional pass attempt, he threw an interception. I know he is young and inexperienced but that is not a great way to start a long career in the NFL.

This did not look like the same Brown's team that had a decent pre-season. Maybe the defense was affected by the loss of linebacker Chris Spielman to retirement.

Now for all of you Browns fans out there, don't think that I am just one of those people that will give up on a team after one game. I am not one of those by any means. This will be a rough year for the Browns and I am not sure if they will be able to win more than six games.

But I have faith. I have waited just as long as everyone else in Cleveland for a team to watch on Sundays. I say give them a few years to get everything sorted out and then they will be ready to compete for a league title.

Then Mr. Carey's words will have more effect.

Mazzarella heart, soul of Falcons

By BRAD MEYER
The BG News

As another club men's rugby season is getting underway the likelihood of a winning record, a MAC Championship and the players having a good time are almost guarantees.

The reason for these three re-occurring year after year are due in large part to the dedication of one individual.

For the past 31 years Roger Mazzarella of Bowling Green, a 1973 graduate, has been associated with arguably the most successful sport at Bowling Green State University. Rugby, which has amassed 62 straight winning seasons, (two seasons per year) holds claim to this distinction and records show why this argument can be made.

First as a player and now as head coach, Mazzarella has been a part of this tradition since the beginning and helped elevate the sport to a level of excellence comparative to a modern-day sports dynasty.

From guiding teams to three different appearances in the National Collegiate Championship Final Four to traveling to England and playing Parliament in a game of rugby, Mazzarella is synonymous with club rugby and is the reason it cannot be mentioned without his name.

Mazzarella's association with the sport began during his freshman year in college when one of the students in charge of the rugby practice asked him to give it a try. At the time Mazzarella was participating in freshman football, but decided rugby was the game for him.

From that first experience Mazzarella's fascination grew for the sport where all 15 participants on the field get to run the ball, score and make tackles.

Football's loss was rugby's gain as Mazzarella became a member of the first organized rugby team at the University in 1968. The team was founded by two students, Tim Fox, a 1969 graduate, and Jerry Nicolosi, a graduate in 1970, along with Dr. Sam Cooper, emeritus professor of physical education.

He continued to play club rugby until 1982. After deciding not to play full time, he then started to take on more of a central role in the administration and coaching of the club.

Mazzarella, a Bowling Green Junior High School seventh grade science teacher, in the fall of 1985 assumed the head coaching position previously held by Bill Cotton, a visiting accounting professor at the University from 1981-85.

"One of the philosophies of the club sport program is to have a student run the organization and I keep that in mind as much as possible," Mazzarella said.

The most interesting aspect in Mazzarella's coaching philosophy is that everyone on his squad of more than 90 players gets to play. Each team member participates on one of four squads who play games against other colleges and universities. The results from their games are combined into one overall team record.

"Even the lowest team counts in our record," he said. "We all win or we all lose."

Losing does not occur too often as club rugby, which has seasons in both the fall and spring, has compiled a record of 772-134-38 during the past 15 years, including a string of 18 consecutive Mid-American Conference Championships.

He was captain of the 1982 team that began the consecutive title streak. His son, Tony, continued the legacy and captained the 1998 squad to a conference championship.

Mazzarella's formula for championship success is embedded in his belief of allowing every player the opportunity to participate, while in the process displaying confidence in them to perform at the highest level regardless of their experience.

"One of the main reasons I went out for the sport is because everyone gets to play," Ivan Mericle of Elyria, a sophomore physical therapy major said. "Everyone gets along with each other, which makes the sport a lot of fun."

When one of the younger squads is playing, Mazzarella has noticed himself doing less coaching and more watching.

"During the halftime, the veteran players from the more experienced squads are giving the advice and tips to the younger players at their respective positions," Mazzarella said. "Everybody pulls for each other and that is very satisfying."

"With Roger (which is what he prefers his players to call him) and the whole team there is a lot of camaraderie," Michael Swanbeck of Huron, a senior recreation and tourism major said. "Everyone on the team is best of friends and we always stick together."

The "family-like" atmosphere equated into another successful campaign as the team posted a 31-5 record this past spring season.

Bowling Green rugby, who also has a women's team, is a club sport, as opposed to a varsity sport. That means it receives minimal support from the University and places more responsibility on Mazzarella. Along with his coaching duties, he is also responsible for scheduling of matches and referees, raising funds for the club and equipment purchasing. He also spends his time recruiting players to come to the University and play club rugby.

Rugburs take 3 from Central, go to 4-1

By JOE FINNELL
Special to The BG News

A high stakes clash between two of the top rugby teams in the country ended with still in line for a national championship Sunday.

The second ranked Bowling Green rugby team edged third ranked Central Michigan 21-12, 10-0 and 5-0. The three matches should play a big role in who goes to the big dance and who stays home at playoff time.

BG is now 4-1 on the season. "Playing Central is never easy," BG captain Mike Swanbeck said. "The last couple of matches have been 10-0, 8-0, scores like that. This weekend was an offensive blowout in comparison."

The big question for BG prior to the weekend was how well the Falcons' newcomers would react to the increase in pace.

"That was our biggest worry all week," coach Roger Mazzarella said. "Practice had been a bit disjointed all week with eight new faces on the pitch. As it turned out, as a team we played very well, but individually, we still need some work. Attitude and intensity can cover up a lot of dropped balls and forward passes."

Intensity proved to be the key to beating a more polished CMU team. Every Chippewa ball carrier was met by five or six Falcon defenders and were knocked back for no gain. BG capitalized on many CMU miscues, turning them into points.

"I don't understand what it's going to take to beat those guys," CMU captain Carter Oosterhouse said. "I think our record against them is something like 1-40. BG always finds a way to scratch out another win."

Center Mike Swanbeck opened the scoring for BG when Scott Mullins' bone jarring tackle on a CMU ball carrier popped the ball loose. Swanbeck scooped up the ball and cruised through the Chippewa defense scoring under the posts.

The Falcons made it 14-0 when Craig Sunday trampled a half dozen defenders on a BG penalty play bulling his way for the team's second try.

Central chipped away at the Falcon lead adding two tries and a conversion to tighten the score 14-12.

BG put the game away when flanker Chris Dlugosz hit Oosterhouse, knocking the ball halfway across the field. Falcon lock John Jackowski picked up the loose ball and crossed the goal line untouched extending the lead to 21-12.

"This game's result is going to have important consequences for both teams in the post-season," Swanbeck said.

The low scoring continued the rest of the afternoon in the remaining matches. In game two,

"I don't understand what it's going to take to beat those guys."

Carter Oosterhouse
CMU captain

center Jesse Sandoval and flanker Troy Donze picked up their first career scores as BG won 10-0. In the third match, rookie flanker Wes Holsinger got the game's only score in a 5-0 victory.

The Falcons travel to Miami for another triple header Saturday.

FROM THE WIRE

Boxer dies after fight injuries

NORTH KANSAS CITY, Mo.— NABF super-middleweight champion Randie Carver died Tuesday, two days after losing consciousness in a title defense at Harrah's North Kansas City Casino. He was 24.

Carver, who had been in critical condition since undergoing emergency brain surgery late Sunday, went down in the 10th round of a 12-round bout with Kabary Salem.

Sanders might return to NFL

Barry Sanders is interested in returning to the NFL but not with the Detroit Lions, ESPN reported Tuesday on its Web site.

The star running back, who retired in July, has offered to repay $5.4 million of his signing bonus if the Lions release or trade him this season, ESPN said.

Hill signs one-year extension

CINCINNATI — Outfielder Glenallen Hill agreed to a one-year contract extension Tuesday with the Chicago Cubs, hoping he can be part of a turnaround in 2000.

Hill has been one of the Cubs' most important backups, starting 52 games in left field, right field and as a designated hitter.

Lett suspended for fifth time

IRVING, Texas — Dallas Cowboys defensive tackle Leon Lett will miss the next seven games as punishment for his fifth violation of the NFL's substance abuse policy.

Lett, 30, had been suspended indefinitely since June 4 and missed the team's opening win at Washington on Sunday. The NFL's ruling, announced today, will allow the former Pro Bowler to rejoin the Cowboys for the Nov. 14 home game against Green Bay — if he has no further violations.

"We're disappointed, but I'm glad we have a definitive time we can expect him back," Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said. "We're disappointed we don't have him now."

Besides his involvement with the University program, Mazzarella has also been an integral part in establishing and promoting collegiate rugby in this country.

He has held numerous positions at the state, regional and national level including president of the Ohio and Midwest Rugby Football Unions and a seat on the United States Rugby Board of Directors, among other accomplishments.

Why does one person do so much for a sport? It is certainly not for the money, for which he receives none for coaching. For Mazzarella his involvement in club rugby and the sport is simply a labor of love.

"I think his longevity in the sport can be explained by his success on the field, as well as in the satisfaction he gets from seeing these young people mature and succeed in their personal accomplishments and growth," Thad Long, director of intramurals and club sports said. "He is a one-man show, and I don't know how anyone could ever replace him."

Playing for Coach Mazzarella was both rewarding and fun, Corey Ward, a 1998 graduate, of Gaithersburg, MD said.

What stood out to Ward is the relationship Coach Mazzarella had with his players.

"It was as much a student/teacher relationship as it was a player/coach, which turned into a friendship," Ward said.

"He was and still is a friend," Ward said, who followed his brother, a 1996 graduate of Columbus, into rugby and will see his younger brother, Preston, of Toledo, a freshman physical therapy major, participate in the sport this fall.

For 31 years teaching his players values they can utilize in life after rugby has been just as important to him as the winning and excellence they experience on the field.

"I've been told many times by alumni that rugby was the best thing that happened in their lives at Bowling Green," he says. "I hope that I'm teaching them the value of teamwork, commitment and honor, things that will be useful the rest of their lives."

Golf sets sights high for Invitational

By DAN NIED

The BG News

Last year at the Falcon Invitational, the Bowling Green women's golf team came close to setting a new school record with a two round score of 314.

They finished fifth in the tournament.

In this year's version, they hope to set their sights higher.

"It is a feasible goal that we can win this tournament," head coach Kurt Thomas said about his team's only home tournament. "We want to play the best we can and we can win."

The Falcons will welcome Toledo, Dayton, Ohio, Xavier and Youngstown State, as well as several smaller schools, to their first competition of the year.

While every member of the women's golf team will participate, only six players will be eligible to score. Shooting for BG will be last year's team leader sophomore Shannon Smith. Smith averaged 85.46 strokes over 24 rounds last year. She should be ready to help the team make improvements.

Seniors Shannon Sharp, Missy Hinds and Kate Kolesnik will also score for the Falcons.

But the interesting aspect of the competition may lie in freshman Shelly Binzel. Binzel will be competing in her first college competition. How she will react may be key in the Falcon's success.

"She's ready to play," Thomas said. "She has been playing well lately."

The sixth position will be decided later today. The top candidates are sophomore Angel

"It is a feasible goal that we can win this tournament. We want to play the best we can and we can win."

Kurt Thomas

Golf coach

Garrett, freshman Stephanie Elsea and junior Jennifer Stiff.

Thomas thinks that the five players that are already in place can be effective.

"All have been shooting in the mid 80s," he said. "On any given day they can all shoot well."

Men's Golf

The Falcons men's golf team played in their first competition over the weekend. They finished 16th out of 17 teams at the Iowa Hawkeye Intercollegiate.

Sophomore Justin Gillham led

BG with a three round score of 225. Gillham shot a 70 in the first round, but then tailed off in the next two with scores of 77 and 78 respectively. Gillham finished tied for 38th place in the competition.

Also playing for Bowling Green was junior Jon Smarrelli, sophomore Brian Gerken, freshman Adam Balls and senior Dave Kotsos. None of them finished higher than 70th.

BG's next competition is Sept. 24-25 at the Eastern Kentucky Invitational.

Ruth moves ahead of Aaron in All-Century team

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Babe Ruth moved ahead off Hank Aaron for the first time in the latest results of the baseball's All-Century team voting released on Tuesday.

Ruth, whose record of 714 career home runs are second to Aaron's 755, leads the voting in the outfield by 838 votes over Aaron. Ruth has 1,108,286 votes to Aaron's 1,107,448 in the closest race on the ballot.

Ted Williams is third with 1,077,862, followed by Willie Mays, who has 1,068,473.

Pete Rose, baseball's career hits leader, but who is on the sport's permanently disqualified list because of gambling, is ninth with 602,240.

In balloting sponsored by MasterCard that ends Sept. 19, fans vote for two players at each infield position, two catchers, six pitchers and nine outfielders.

Other leaders are catcher Johnny Bench (966,713), first baseman Lou Gehrig (1,156,278), second baseman Jackie Robinson (754,795), shortstop Cal Ripken Jr., (640,995), third baseman Mike Schmidt (818,792) and pitchers Nolan Ryan (949,600) and Sandy Koufax (929,066).
